

MUSIC SUPPLEMENT TO LUTE NEWS 155 (OCTOBER 2025): LUTE INTABULATIONS OF MUSIC BY LUDWIG SENFL - PART II: ANOTHER TWO MOTETS AND THIRTEEN LIED PLUS TEN DOUBTFULS

Here is the second half of the lute intabulations of music by Ludwig Senfl (1490-1543) - the first half were in the supplement to Lute News 152 (December 2024). To recap, Senfl was born in Basle or Zurich and is recorded as an alto chorister in the chapel of Emperor Maximilian I (1459-1519) in Vienna. He was a pupil of Heinrich Isaac (c.1450-1517) who was court composer from 1497 until 1515, but the post Senfl held at court is not recorded. He moved to the ducal court in Munich in 1523 and died in Munich between January and March 1543 when he was fifty-three and his now lost tombstone acknowledged his renowned reputation at the ducal court. The images of Senfl above are of medals presumably cast to honor him, left to right, by Friedrich Hagenauer 1529, Hagenauer undated and Hans Schwarz 1519.

This second supplement includes a further thirteen lied (S19-30) and two more motets (S31/32) together with ten doubtful attributions, either because of ascriptions to more than one composer in different sources (S34/35/37/39/40/41/43) or because the intabulations are different arrangements of Senfl's melodies to the published vocal models (S36/38¹/42). The intabulations for lute are assumed to be instrumental settings despite the eight from Ochsenkun's Tabulatur buch of 1558 including the lied text although not underlaid. The sources of the vocal models and confirmation of ascriptions to Senfl as well as the reasons for assigning doubtful attributions are listed in the online catalogue of the New Senfl Edition.² The worklist here includes the numbering from the New Senfl Edition (S=secular M=motet and * for doubtful attribution). Modern editions of scores for many Senfl works are on the International Music Score Library Project website.³ Only ten of the lute intabulations bear ascriptions in at least one source: S32, one source of S19, and the seven items in Ochsenkun (plus S40* is ascribed to Mahu in Ochsenkun and the vocal sources to Senfl or Mahu).

The more direct intabulations were chosen here for those items with more than one source,⁴ as the embellishment in some sources obscures the beauty of the melodies and the clarity of vocal lines and those chosen are more accessible for players of all abilities to facilitate a wider appreciation of this wonderful music. In fact in some places the strict adherence to the vocal original is quite awkward to play on the lute and so they have been simplified slightly by editing out a voice with changes highlighted in grey - details of editorial changes in the critical commentary at the end of the Lutezine that will accompany this Lute News. Most of the intabulations for lute follow the voices of the vocal models closely, often reducing the texture by omitting the alto or another voice making them easier to play. Heckel duet lute I parts (S19/29) are satisfactory as solos so that the second lute parts are dispensable. These intabulations of Senfl's music are found in eighteen prints and fourteen manuscripts all but two in German tablature and transcribed into French tablature here.

¹ Although listed as a source for S192 in the New Senfl Edition (see fn 2), in fact the lute setting is different music to the vocal model and the editors have not yet replied to my request for clarification.
