¹¹ The Paris Bibliothèque nationale copies of the lute books of Sixt Kargel Novae elegantissimae (Jobin, Strasbourg 1574) and Melchior Newsidler Tabulatura continens (Benedict Drusina, Frankfurt 1573) are bound together with manuscript additions of three lute solos copied c.1580 in German tablature on the front and rear endpapers (shelfmark F-Pn Vmb.65). François-Pierre Goy kindly sent me photographs of the manuscript additions comprising two dances and an untitled intabulation that I recognised as Valentin Bakfark Harmoniarum Musicarum 1565, ff. 1r-1v Fantasia Trium Vocum. The first dance is also followed by the semi-legible inscription 'Petrus Kouila astronomus bej dem weidrus od Baturj vnd der i. ...' suggesting the lute books were owned by an otherwise unknown Polish court astrologer to King Stephen Bathory (1533-1586), Prince of Transylvania (1571-1576) and King of Poland (1575-1586). His nephew Sigismund Bathori, Prince of Transylvania 1586-1602, is the presumed dedicatee of a Bathori Tantz - see Chorea 25 in Lutezine 149 (April 2024).

a lute book copied by Giovanni Pacalono of Padua. The dozen or so sources of the Passamezzo Ungaro are more or less concordant albeit with diversity in the details of figuration and it is possible that they all stem from an original arrangement for lute by Bakfark. Pacalono's print of lute trios Longe Elegantissima Excellentissimi Musici Ioannis Pacaloni published by Pierre Phalèse in Louvain and lute book (I-CFVd) dated 1565 are the earliest of the sources although Pacalono may have copied the Passamezzo Ongaro into his manuscript after 1571 the year Bakfark moved to Padua unless he had access to Bakfark's music before the latter moved there. Settings of the Passamezzo Ongaro for three lutes (H12ji-iii & H12ki-iii) are found in Pacalono's print and a somewhat different trio setting is ascribed to him in his manuscript. The soprano part of the manuscript version is closely concordant with Bakfark's lute solo in the same manuscript suggesting Pacalono made the trio arrangement from Bakfark's solo and it seems likely they were acquainted as both were in Padua at the same time.¹² A cittern part to the lute trio (H12l) is found in Viaera Novae et Elegantissima in Cythara also published by Phalèse, in 1564.¹³

BALLADS AND COUNTRY DANCES SEVERAL ABOUT CUCKOLDS AND SCOULDING WIVES

The Hungarian dances above are contrasted with another set of tunes that are from English ballads or country dances surviving as instrumental settings for renaissance and transitional tuned lutes, gittern, viol, violin or keyboard and arranged for renaissance lute here.

The only two known sources of B1 and four sources of B2 were in the accompanying Lute News and three more settings of B2 are included here. B4/9/11/12/13 are probably ballad tunes, songs or country dances although no texts or other references to them are known. Several ballads here are on the theme of marital discord, deriding either the cuckold husband - accepting an unfaithful wife and unaware their children are not his own (cuckold a reference to cuckoos laying eggs in another birds nest) - (B5/6/8) or the scoulding - nagging, grumbling, complaining - wife (B14/15/16). The titles of B13 and App. 3 also hint at similar themes.

B3. Millfield:

The country dance tune Millfield in the first ten editions of Playford's The Dancing Master is presumably the tune of the ballad licensed with the Stationers Company in May 1581 by William Elderton describing events in 1578: 'A new Ballad declaring the great Treason conspired against the young King of Scots and how one Andrewe Browne, an Englishman who was the Kings Chamberlaine prevented the same. To the tune of Milfield, or els to Greensleeues' [an alternative tune] beginning 'Jesus

B5. Room for cuckolds/company

Two sources of this tune are known, one for lute and the other for lyra viol, transcribed for lute here.²⁰ It is probably the tune for the ballad registered with the Stationers Company as 'Rome for company in Bartholomew faire' in 1614 (Rollins no. 2324)²¹ and the text in the broadside 'Roome for Companie, heere comes Good Fellowes, To a pleasant new tune' (EBBA 20074 1617?)²² beginning 'Roome for Company, heere comes good fellowes, Roome for Company, in Bartholmew Faire'. The tune 'Room for Cuckolds' is presumably the same as 'Room for Company', with 'company' a euphemism for 'cuckolds, as the same music was also used for later ballads 'The fetching home of May: OR, A pretty new Ditty wherein is made knowne, How each Lasse doth strive for to have a greene Gowne (euphemism for the amatory longing of maidens in spring). To the Tune of, Roome for Company, &c' beginning 'Now Pan leaves piping, The Gods have done feasting' (EBBA 30357 1634-1658?) and 'A Scourge for the Pope, Satyrically scourging the itching sides of his obstinate Brood, in England. To the tune of Roome for &c' beginning 'A disguised Jesuite. Famous Brittany, Give thanks to God on high, Who hath delivered thee from Popish fictions' (EBBA 20264 1624?). The ballad was retitled 'The Green Gown' and printed with the music in Thomas D'Urfey's Wit and Mirth, or Pills to Purge Melancholy IV 1719-1720 [reprinted as Songs Compleat, Pleasant and Divertive, Set To Musick], p. 26 and the tune is used again in the sixth volume of Pills, p. 136 for a related ballad beginning 'Room for Gentlemen, here comes a Company, Room for Gentlemen, here comes my Lord-Mayor'. However, the music is apparently different for 'Hey for Horn-Fair: OR, Room for Cuckolds, here comes a Company. To the Tune of, The Winchester Wedding' beginning 'At Charlton there was a Fair, where Lads and Lasses did meet, Young Johnny and Jenny came there, to Dance to the Fiddle so sweet; Brisk Sue she led up a Dance, and called for Sellengers-round' (EBBA 21792 1685). Sportive Wit: The Muses Merriment 1656, pp. 27-31 includes the song 'The hunting of the Gods. To the Tune of Room for Cuckolds' beginning 'Songs of Sonnets, and rusticall Roundelaye' with refrain 'the hunting the hare' (with versions also in five later prints - see Simpson, pp. 615-616). The tune is found again in Thompson's Compleat Collection of 200 Favourite Country Dances c. 1780 IV, p. 52 where it is called 'Hunt the Hare' derived from the refrain to the previous ballad.

B6. Cuckolds all in a row

No lute settings of the tune Cuckolds all in a row are known, but is found in three Playford editions, set for gittern and lyra viol in tablature as well as a violin melody, all transcribed for lute here. A tune of this name is alluded to in the pamphlet Round about our coal-fire, or Christmas Entertainments (4th edition 1734), Prologue V: 'Then to the Hop we'll go Where we'll jig and caper, Cuckolds all-a-row, Will shall pay the Scraper [fiddler]. In the 1780 version of the nursery rhyme 'Mary, Mary, quite contrary, How does your garden grow, With silver bells and cockle shells, And pretty maids all in a row' the last line reads 'Sing cuckolds all on a row'.²³

A broadside is known of a ballad titled 'Cuckolds all a-Row. Or, A Summons issued out from the Master-Cuckolds and Wardens of Fumblers-Hall' (EBBA 32076 1685-1688) but the tune called for is 'Ladies of London' which is different music. However, the tune is named for other ballads: 'A pleasant new song that plainly doth show, that all are Beggars, both high and low ... To the tune of Cuckolds all a row' beginning 'Come cease your songs of Cuckolds row for now tis something stale' with the refrain 'Beggars all a row' (EBBA 36208 1639-1640?); and 'The Cruell Shrow: OR, The Patient Mans Woe ... To the Tune of Cuckolds all arowe' beginning 'Come Batchelers and Married men, and listen to my Song' (EBBA 30026 1601-1640?). It is also likely that the tune here is the same as 'Is there no more Cuckolds but I' called for in the ballad 'Roome for Cuckolds: or my Lord Lamberts Entrance into Sodome and Gomorrah' beginning 'You cow[ar]d-hearted Citizens, What is your Damnd pretence' with refrain 'Cuckolds all-a-Row' (EBBA 37127/36551/35033/36691/37124).

B7. The merie merch[an]t

The Board lute book is a unique source of this tune which is different to other tunes associated with merchants (The Merchant/The Merchant Man/The Merchant of Embden/The Rich Merchant Man and There was a Rich Merchant Man, see Simpson, pp. 602-604); it is also unrelated to 'A merchant new come over' (two cittern sources known: GB-Cjc G.13.28, p. 160 a merchant new come over; Playford Cittern 1652, p. 17 Merchant new come over - cittern) and to 'The Merchants Daughter' mentioned in the Lleweni tune list (the merchant dogbter) and other sources, see Sally Harper 'An Elizabethan tune list from Lleweni Hall, North Wales' Royal Musical Association Research Chronicle 38 (2005), pp. 45-98).

B8. The merry cuckold

No lute setting of 'The merry cuckold' is known but the two sources of the tune, for keyboard and recorder are transcribed/arranged for lute here. Not in Simpson but a ballad of this name was registered with the Stationer's Company in June 1630 (Rollins no. 1716), and the text 'The Merry Cuckold. Who frolickly taking what chance doth befall, Is very well pleased with Wife, hornes and all. To the Tune of, The Merry Cuckold/ The second part. To the same tune' beginning 'You married men, whom Fate hath assign'd, To marry with them that are too much kind, Learn, as I do, to beare with yout wives; All you that doe so, shall liue merry lives' is preserved in the Roxburghe ballads,²⁴ and in a broadside (EBBA 30182) - illustration from it is above.

B9. The Gillyflower

Four lute settings survive in two tonalities one with divisions and ascribed to Robert Kindersley, who was employed 1626-1634 as musician to Charles I and recorded as playing in court masques.²⁶ His setting as an almaine with elaborate divisions could have been an arrangement of the tune for a masque performance.

Three lyra viol settings of this tune in two different tunings are known, transcribed for renaissance lute here. The title is not known from the ballad or country dance literature and it sounds Scottish and the title might refer to Kilkenny in Ireland.

B11. The Eglantine / Branch

These two similarly titled pieces are probably also ballad or country dance tunes, the first alternatively titled Wostock in triple time with two strains of four bars - arranged for lute from the surviving mixed consort parts although the tune is probably missing as it would have been in the now lost treble viol part. The second is a lute solo and distinct from the first in duple time with two strains of ten and thirteen bars.

B12. Home again market is done

Another unique tune and title probably from a now lost ballad or country dance. The dotted rhythm of the last of the four variations in the source is awkward in duple time and sounds better in triple time as reconstructed editorially in variations five and six.

- GB-Lam 603, f. 11r iii My wife at home - I cannot keep my wife at home 32-33

B13. I cannot keep my wife at home

Another unique tune and title probably from a lost ballad or country dance. Again the dotted rhythms are awkward and so is followed by a reconstructed simplification.

- GB-Lam 603, f. 11r My wife at home - I cannot keep my wife at home 34

B14/15/16. The Scoulding Wife/Woman

The titles of three different tunes refer to a scoulding woman/wife - none of them in Simpson, who only refers to the title in the context of a different tune, Step stately (Simpson, p. 686) - see below. B14 is titled 'The Scoulding Woman' and set in a high register on the lute so has been transposed down a 4th; the corrupt barring in the original has been reconstructed and rhythms have been halved editorially. B15 is titled 'The Scoulding Wife' and has been transcribed for lute from a lyra viol setting. The title of B16 is found in only one of the many sources of the music, and may be a scribal error.³⁰ In a continental source it is ascribed to the French/German/Belgian lutenist and gamba player Nicolas Hotman (c.1610-1663) and in another source it is the first of a group or suite of pieces (ballet/prelude/lesson/courante - VdGS Hotman 36-39). It was previously thought to be by Hugh Facey because it is on the same page as another piece ascribed to him in the Manchester Gamba Book (VdGS Facey 6-9). However, the melody is like ballad-like and it is possible that Hotman's setting was based on a ballad tune.

The broadside 'The Scoulding Wife, OR, The Poor Mans Lamentation of his bad Market in his chusing him a wife To a New Play-House Tune' beginning 'Was there ever any Man so plag'd with a Trul [whore]' (EBBA 21800 1689) could be one of the tunes here, but the text is also found in 'A late and true story of a furious Scold, served in her kind. The tune, Step Stately'³¹ beginning 'Was ever man so vex'd with a Trull in Westminster Drollery 1671 vol I, p. 37, so set to a different tune. Another possible ballad to one of the tunes here is 'The Scolding Wife To a pleasant new Tune' beginning 'There was a young-man for lucre of gain' (EBBA 33867, 34678, 35675, 30845 1672-1696?), but other ballads with related titles name different tunes: 'Scolding wives Vindication or An answer to the Cuckolds Complaint - tune The Cuckolds Complaint' (EBBA 20987, 20885, 20913, 35355, 20896, 30848, 31970, 34663); 'The Patient Husband, and the Scoulding Wife - To the Tune of, Bonny bonny bird' beginning 'All you gallants in City or Town come listen a while to my song'; and 'The Scolding Wife: New Sett by Mr. Akeroyd' beginning 'Some men they do delight in Hounds, and some in Hawks take Pleasure', a song in Thomas D'Urfey's Wit and Mirth, or Pills to Purge Melancholy III (1701-3), pp. 141-142 with music that is different to the tunes here.
